The surface of the precast concrete part facing away from the casing is smoothed by the trowelling machine. The precast concrete part is stored for a specific period of time in the curing chamber or else in a buffer at trowelling stations. The trowelling machine then travels over the pallet and smooths down the concrete part. The trowelling machine is equipped with adjustable rotating vanes and various add-on discs.